J. Ba. Lawrence
Medical Officer,
Central Jail, Bangalore.

Chinnaswamy Naidu, a hindu male convict, aged about 30 years, married, was sent by the Superintendent, Central Jail, Bangalore, on 22-1-38, as he was found to behave in a disorderly manner while in Jail.

On admission, he was found to be a young man of an athletic build, healthy and strong, with no positive physical signs suggestive of any organic disorder.

Mentally, he was quite conscious of his environment and was correctly orientated to time, place and person; was restless, and noisy with increased psychomotor activity and was found frequently to indulge in curious grimaces and grotesque positions. He was very fond ^{of} ~~and~~ interfering and attracting attention of the staff whenever they passed by and was always happy and pleasant in mood with grandiose ideas: was answering questions relevantly and promptly during the beginning of a conversation, but used to go 'off' at a tangent with flight of ideas; was always playful, mischievous and silly in behaviour and at times was exhibiting an emotional display. His comprehension was good, and memory reliable on a superficial level; was lacking in judgement and had neither an insight nor an outlook on life; was taking his food very well, and slept usually without any draught.

Treatment: Soon after admission, he was given hot tub-bath followed by grain 10 of veronal for about 3 days, and when he became quieter, he was put on plain carminatives and bromides.

In conclusion, from observations made during his stay in the hospital, it was noticed that his play-acting and dramatic behaviour in the presence of the staff, was more suggestive of malingering than of any gross mental disorder.

SUPERINTENDENT,
Mental Hospital, Bangalore.
